INTRODUCTORY

The second annual publication of the Glendale, Tropic and Casa Verdugo City Directory is herewith presented with the hope that the information will be found complete enough to be of interest to all who may have occasion to make use of it.

While arbitrary lines divide the inhabitants of this prosperous community into three sections, to all intents and purposes it is one rapidly growing city, and should, and probably will be in the near future, under one municipal government.

The information in this directory thoroughly establishes the fact that this is the most rapidly growing district in Los Angeles county; and it is therefore quite probable that the percentage of gain in population in Glendale and Tropic is at this time greater than any other city in the entire country.

The number of names in this book indicates a population of 11,096 in this community, proportioned as follows: Glendale, 7,905; Tropic, 2,325; Casa Verdugo, 928.

The information for the last federal census was taken in June, 1910, and showed a population in Glendale of 2,746. The information for this directory was taken in May, therefore the increase in population for Glendale during the past thirty-five months has been 5,159, 190 per cent, at the rate of approximately five persons every day during this period of time. At the same ratio of growth the next government enumeration should show a population of about 18,000. But it is more likely to be over 20,000; in fact, it appears that there is little danger of anyone overestimating the future growth of this valley. There are two organizations that invariably reflect the growth, energy and prosperity of any municipality, a Chamber of Commerce and an Elks' lodge. The Glendale Chamber of Commerce, with an active membership of 454 is no doubt greater than any other similar commercial body in a city of equal population in California, the first state in the Union when the matter of boosting and advertising is considered. The membership of the lodge of Elks is 350, which is believed by many to be larger than any in the country, population considered.

There are at the present time within the corporate limits of the City of Glendale 55 miles of streets, 35 miles of which are improved; 1½ miles of standard sheet asphalt now being laid on Brand Boulevard and West Broadway. There are also 45 miles of cement sidewalks, and 9¼ miles of ornamental street lights, 1¼ miles being 5-cluster iron standard.

Glendale is justly proud of its splendid system of public schools, five commodious buildings being included, one a union high school. And also of a well equipped and managed municipal lighting system. And of the transportation facilities, as the trolley service is conceded to be the best on any of the many lines radiating from the great Southern Metropolis. And that it always has been and always will be a "dry" town; so dry that even pool and billiard parlors are prohibited.

As the City of Tropic was incorporated subsequent to the last census, there is no way of showing the growth of that city since that time, but it has been unusually large. There may be more ideal places for a home than in this valley, but they are undiscovered.
